What Beta Sigma Phi Means to Me

By: Vanette Allen

My Beta Sigma Phi sisters mean the world to me. In October of 2005, a tornado hit our home and destroyed all the inside. We moved out into a motel for three months. Our furniture and most of the things in the house survived, but the house had to be gutted and redone.

I was home by myself with my little Italian greyhound, Princess. Ronnie, my husband, was on his way home from out of town, and didn't know anything until he saw the damage and all the cars at the house.

My sorority sisters got the word and they were there to help in whatever we needed. In the three months that our home was being repaired, my sisters in my chapter, as well as other seven area chapters, came to our rescue. They brought food to the motel, gave us gift certificates and had us over to eat at their homes. We got a lot of cards and telephone calls, which meant so much.

Then, one night at a regular meeting, my wonderful sisters gave me a "Food Pounding" to restock my pantry. That was the most wonderful surprise that I could have had. My Beta Sigma Phi sisters are always there for any problems that any of us have. There is nothing like Beta Sigma Phi!
